To see the video on Youtube click here I have download the preview (up to 3000KB) of the video and i want to do a conversion to different formats (.mp4,.3gp,.flv etc.) I am using a Linux based machine (Debian OS) and i don't have any.avi file of this video. Thanks for your help. A: The MPEG-4 ASP video container is pretty flexible, so you could use ffmpeg to convert it to anything between FLV and MP4. `ffmpeg -i video.mp4 -vcodec h264 -acodec aac -f mp4 -s 1920x1080 -r 30 -y video_1920x1080.flv` When Is Self-Knowledge a Problem? September 3, 2009 at 3:26 am A UCLA study found that college students who perceived themselves as intelligent actually experienced lower cognitive ability than they believed they had. The study, which can be found on the UCLA website, found that self-perception of intelligence is strongly correlated with actual test scores, regardless of the students' actual intelligence level. Asperger's Syndrome is characterized by a lack of knowledge about one's own mental and social state. When Asperger's patients ask how their current thoughts differ from the thoughts of people around them, they typically cannot tell. Areas of Self-Knowledge that May Need Improvement Asperger's Syndrome can be characterized by a deficit in "theory of mind." This refers to our ability to know the thoughts and feelings of others. Although some people with Asperger's Syndrome can learn to understand their own feelings and the feelings of others, they typically cannot recognize emotional expressions in others and often are unable to tell whether others are upset with them. A person with Asperger's Syndrome knows what to expect of himself. He may have an accurate sense of his strengths and weaknesses but is unable to recognize what he does well and what he does not do well. Another area of self-knowledge that may be a problem for people with Asperger's Syndrome is the ability to distinguish their subjective experiences from what is happening around them. The impaired ability to perceive the subtle and distinctive differences in one's own perceptions of the external world — the tendency to merge experiences into a single flow of information — is one of the
